1. The Pravda Publishing House, the official publishing organ of the Communist Party of Slovakia, has two separate departments, one for newspapers and one for book publishing, under a joint management and director. The offices of the book publishing department are located on Spitalska ulica; the editorial offices of the newspapers (except Pravda) and other publications are located at 10 and 14 Jesenskeho ulica and at 8 Gorkeho ulica. Most of the Pravda offices are located at 12 Jesenskeho ulica, Bratislava. 25X1
2. The following papers were published by the Pravda Publishing House between 1948 and 1954:
  - a. Pravda, a daily, three issues appearing simultaneously in Bratislava, Zilina, and Kosice. Their contents are almost identical, except for local news added in the towns. Total circulation of the three Pravda editions was 260,000, but decreased to 210,000 in 1954.
  - b. Uj Szo, Hungarian daily, with a circulation of 55,000 to 60,000.
  - c. Propagandista, a fortnightly published in Slovak and Hungarian, edited by the central Party organs and containing propaganda material and information for the Party branches throughout Slovakia. Its circulation is 15,000 to 20,000.
  - d. Slovo Agitatora, a fortnightly published in Slovak and Hungarian (Hungarian title A Nepszevelo Szava), edited by the central Party organs. It has a circulation of 20,000 in Slovak and 6,000 in Hungarian.
  - e. Pod Zastavo Socialismus, A Slovak fortnightly dealing mainly with Party ideology, with a circulation of approximately 20,000.
  - f. Zivot Strani, a fortnightly published in Slovak and Hungarian (Hungarian title Partelet), with a circulation of approximately 80,000 in Slovak and 10,000 in Hungarian.

- g. Rolnicka Nedela, a Slovak weekly concerned with agriculture, with a circulation of approximately 45,000. Its publication was discontinued by the Pravda company in 1953. A similar agricultural weekly, the Rolnicka Noviny, is now published by another enterprise.
- h. Srsen, a satirical fortnightly with a circulation of 15,000 to 20,000. Publication was stopped in 1953.
- i. Nedela, a weekly magazine with a circulation of 20,000 publication of which was stopped in 1952.
- j. Moda A Textil, a monthly fashion magazine, with a circulation of 40,000.
3. Each paper published by the Pravda Publishing House has its own editorial staff. The Pravda staff consists of between 40 and 50 editors and 15 to 20 typists and clerks. Uj Szo employs between 25 and 30 editors and five or six typists. The administration of all the Pravda publications is handled by a joint administrative department, which also handles publicity and new subscriptions. The collective subscriptions department (factories, offices, institutions, newsstands) has a staff of 15 to 20 employees, and the individual subscriptions department has between 10 and 15.
4. The distribution of the papers was handled by a special postal service located in the main Pravda building, but on 1 January 1954 all publicity and distribution tasks were turned over to an enlarged postal service department, the Postova novinova urad, leaving only a skeleton administrative staff in the central Pravda office and one Pravda representative in each of the six district centers -- Bratislava, Nitra, Banska Bystrica, Zilina, Presov, and Kosice. The 15 branch offices throughout Slovakia were closed. Following the reorganization of the distribution department and the introduction of the new postal distribution service on 1 January 1954, the circulation of the Pravda and Uj Szo dailies together decreased by approximately 60,000 copies.
5. In 1948 the Pravda Publishing House showed a net profit of 12.5 million crowns from a gross income of 120 million; the net profit was turned over to the Party. The amount remained approximately the same up until 1952 when the papers stopped accepting advertisements. However, the company still made a profit in 1952 and 1953.
6. The following personalities [redacted] 25X1
